Traumatic Brain Injury

John D. Corrigan, PhD

Professor in the Department of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation at Ohio State University and Director of the Ohio Valley Center for Brain Injury Prevention and Rehabilitation, which among other activities is the designated lead agency in the state of Ohio for TBI policy and planning. He is Editor-in-Chief of the Journal of Head Trauma Rehabilitation.

Workshop Objectives:

By the end of this training, participants will be able to...

1. Describe why TBI causes neurobehavioral problems that are not as common in persons with strokes or anoxic brain injuries.
2. Conduct screening for a problematic history of TBI.
3. Use reference materials provided at this training for problem-solving challenging neurobehavioral problems.

This information is pertinent to all clinical practice and is now a part of the curriculum for OSU social work students
